What is the responsibility of a Garment Factory?

The main duty of a garment factory is to make garments and apparel according to predetermined designs and standards. Its key responsibilities include obtaining raw materials and engaging qualified personnel to run equipment. Garment factories also ensure that manufacturing procedures comply with established quality standards.

Additionally, the factory must oversee inventories, maintain its equipment, and quickly resolve any production-related concerns. A garment factory must also abide by regional labor laws, environmental legislation, and moral standards. It is also crucial to maintain constant improvement in operational efficiency, communicate effectively with clients and suppliers, and achieve production deadlines.

Conclusion

Bangladesh is the second-largest exporter of ready-made garments worldwide. Bangladesh's rapidly developing economy only experiences development in the textile and garment industry. Here I've discussed the top 100 garment factories in Bangladesh that manufacture and supply top-grade products. The global clothing market structure in Bangladesh continues to be heavily impacted by these factories.
